

Gum and Other Prints in Camera Club May Exhibit

By W. G. Bowdoin.

The May exhibition at the Camera Club, No. 121 West 45th Street, consists of multiple gum prints and photographs, executed by miscellaneous processes, which have been loaned for exhibition purposes by William Gordon Shields and Dr. Amasa Day Chaffee.

The prints of both exhibitors hang well together, since both have a very strong and well-developed penchant for the pictorial.

Mr. Shields essays a portrait now and then with excellent results. His "Emma" is particularly fine in its richly modulated light and shade, all most happily subordinated to the face and its expression, that has been most pleasingly worked out according to the best of photographic tradition.

His "Canal Boats of New Amsterdam" is an interesting study of a local river front, in which the boats are delightfully assembled and the rippling water is pictorially composed. "The Hour of Twilight" introduces a number of trees that are admirably treated. The curved trunk of one of them is thrown across the focal plane with vigor. Mr. Shields is here triumphant with his shadows on shadows.

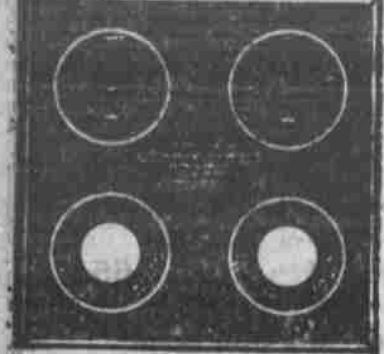

"Wash Day in Little Italy" is eminently picturesque and shows inconspicuously that the Italian weekly wash has a touch, indeed something more than merely a touch, of the pictorial, even if it is not always realized. Perhaps this is because we do not always have Mr. Shields to translate for us. The chiaroscuro in this print again made a feature.

"Cherry Hill, New York," as revealed under a bride's gown, reveals a highly pictorial quality in the print. The vehicular traffic shown incidentally adds to the photographic value.

Simple Simon saw the Stove Man
At the county fair.
Said Simple Simon to the Stove Man,
"Demonstrate your ware."

Said the Stove Man to Simple Simon,
"This stove that I have here
is far the most remarkable Produced in many a year."

"The Elliott Combination Top
And Water Heater, too, Heats water while you boil the greens
Or cook a pot of stew."

"It makes the whole top useful
Like the old cast range of yore;
And you'll find two burners able now
To do the work of four."

"You need not buy a new stove;
We equip your old as well;
And all of its advantages
I can't begin to tell."

Said Simple Simon to the Stove Man,
"I'm simple, I'll agree;
But surely I have sense to know
That that's the Stove for me."

ing with an entrance doorway, is noteworthy in high degree. Dr. Chaffee in his contribution to the current exhibition manifests a mature conception of photographic values. Many of his results are highly pictorial. A Devonshire bit is pleasing in many ways, notwithstanding its lack of balance. At all events the quaintness of the introduced building is pronounced.
